

PLANNING - 1969-1970

In both 1969 and 1970, OCS response to request for comments on Planning Assumptions for 1972-76 and 1973-77 pointed to the very slight value ~~xxxx~~ of those assumptions in ~~planning~~ developing an OCS plan. While of use to the DCI and PPB in identifying activities and providing an indication of increasing or decreasing importance for each activity and target area, it was felt that planning assumptions directed toward intelligence collection, production and covert action would not be of much use to OCS. What was needed for OCS was a system of translating intelligence activities into central ADP service requirements.
